DEFINITION OF RURAL

*Rural is defined by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget (OMB) as geographic areas that are not defined as urban. The OMB defines urban as an area with a central municipality with populations of 50,000 or more, including nearby counties that have strong social and economic links to the central city and surrounding suburbs. Rural is therefore defined as any area that does not fit this definition.

This grant is intended to support the vibrancy of rural communities. Applicants from organizations headquartered in rural towns with less than 50,000 residents are welcome to apply. Applicants located in a town or small city with 50,000-200,000 residents that are 1) not a suburb that's part of a larger urban area and 2) are located in a primarily rural county are also eligible to apply.
